Limits to Group Travel (Fitness, Skills, Mountain Conditions)

Group trips and courses offered by Summit Mountain Guides are designed to meet the specific skills and prior experience of the guests. Each participant must take responsibility to accurately assess their background and physical condition to ensure they meet the prerequisites so the group can travel safely together. Summit Mountain Guides reserves the right to deny participation to any unprepared individual at any time before or on the trip. If a participant is not sufficiently prepared or does not meet the physical fitness or skill level required for the program, Summit Mountain Guides is not responsible for achieving the original objective. If weather or mountain conditions limit trip goals, Summit Mountain Guides reserves the right to change location of the program or reschedule the trip. We are not responsible for meeting advertised objectives should the travelling conditions limit safety.

Cancelled Programs

Should the physical conditions, skills or equipment of participant(s) limit our program, Summit Mountain Guides reserve the right to make changes to an advertised program or cancel the trip / course for the safety and protection of the group. We do not offer any refund to unprepared guests. If Summit Mountain Guides has to cancel a program due to insufficient enrollment, you will receive a full refund and notice of this change at least 30 days prior to trip start date. In the event of cancellation, we are not responsible for any expenses that may be incurred by guests in preparation of trip (equipment, clothing, transportation booking penalties, insurance purchase). If Summit Mountain Guides has to cancel a program due to unsafe conditions (weather, avalanche etc.), you will receive a full refund.

Cancellations

Please contact us if you need to cancel a booking. Cancellations must be made in writing by mail or email and refunds will be processed according to date received.

* Regarding day trips, if changes are made more than 60 days in advance of the program, SMG may retain 100% of total trip costs unless a suitable replacement is found in which case you may be eligible for a refund, less 25% admin fee and any additional bank or costs incurred by cancellation.

* Regarding multi-day programs, if changes are made more than 60 days in advance of the program, SMG may retain 50% of total trip costs unless a suitable replacement is found in which case you may be eligible for a refund, less 25% admin fee and any additional bank or costs incurred by cancellation.

* Cancellations made 60 days or less before program start may not be eligible for any refund. If a suitable replacement is found, you may be eligible for a refund, less 25% admin fee and any additional bank or costs incurred by cancellation.

We recommend you purchase trip cancellation insurance in order to protect the potential of events occurring that make you unable to attend. SMG is not responsible for any additional costs incurred if a guest cancels a trip or changes their booking.

Insurance

We recommend you purchase trip cancellation insurance in order to protect the potential of events occurring that make you unable to attend. Travel medical insurance for adventure travel should cover mountain activities you are involved in; read the fine print or call us for ideas on brokers. Ensure that you have adequate medical for the location your trip is occurring and should include coverage for evacuation or emergency rescue.

Liability

All participants must sign a waiver and release of liability form before participating in a trip or course with Summit Mountain Guides. Please ensure you have viewed the ACMG waiver form to become familiar with conditions. Note that youth under 19 must have a parent or guardian sign on their waiver and release form.
